A PECOS BOY MURDERED.

Particulars of the Naco Tragedy as told by James Herron.

Wednesday, James Herron and his friend, T. L. Wren, of Marathon, visited Nogales. Mr. Herron coming to lay before the American consul the particulars of the recent bloody tragedy at and near Naco and to ask the good offices of the consulate in adjusting the difficulty. Albert Morawetz, United States consul in charge at Sonora, took the statement of Mr. Herron and forwarded the same to Washington.

The account of the matter as given by Mr. Herron is about as follows: Some time ago Mexican customs officials at La Morita, seized a half dozen horses, a part in a band numbering about seventy, which Mr. Herron bought from F. Morgan. The allegation of the officials was that the animals were smuggled. Mr. Herron claimed that of the six seized were smuggled the entire band came within the same category.

We went to Arizpe and there secured an order from the judge of the district for a release of the stock. Even upon that order, as a condition precedent to release and delivery, the Mexican officials demanded from Herron payment of the amount expended in caring for the animals. This Herron refused. It was finally arranged that Herron should come to Nogales, Sonora, under guard, to lay the matter before the federal authorities here. Herron was to be accompanied by his foreman, Robert Clayton, of Pecos, Texas, and a Mexican in his employ, to interpret for him.

The party started from Naco Saturday morning. Just as they were leaving the interpreter was arrested upon some charge. The guards continued their way taking Herron with them. Clayton remained with the interpreter and became engaged in an altercation with the officials in charge who proceeded to arrest him. He declared he would not submit to arrest and when one of the officers took hold of his bridle rein he ordered him to stop it. Upon refusal Clayton fled, killing the man. He immediately crossed the line, close at hand, and, after a shower of bullets and entered a house, where he died in a very short time from the effects of wounds received during his retreat.

Next upon the program three of Herron's cowboy friends saddled up and started in pursuit of the guards who were traveling toward Nogales with Herron. They overtook the party about fifteen miles out, killed two of the three guards, put the other to flight and released Herron, who returned to Naco with them.

Excitement ran high for a time at Naco. A number of armed cowboys gathered on the American side and the Mexican guards were re-inforced by a body of twenty-five auxiliaries under command of Col. Kosterski. But when the two men—Herron and Clayton—left there Monday everything had quieted down.—Clayton.

The New Awakener.

We rejoice in the new awakening of the world's womanhood. Women are eminently fitted for benevolent and religious work by her gentleness, her tenderness, her wealth of sympathy and love. Such work broadens and strengthens her. The woman who is always shut up at home, and who thinks of nothing but the wants and wishes of her own family, is in danger of becoming altogether too narrow for either her own good or the happiness of those about her. Let women work outside, by all means. They need it, and the world needs it.—Rev. Henry Tuckey.

A Charitable Woman.

Baroness Hirsch's charitable bequests are published in The Jewish Chronicle. They amount in all to $6,750,000 francs, or $9,350,000. The New York Baron Hirsch fund receives $1,200,000 and the Montreal Institute $120,000, the Jewish Colonization association in London $2,000,000 and the Long Fund of the London board of guardians $600,000, the emperor's Jubilee foundations in Austria and Galicia $600,000 and $450,000 respectively, the Hirsch Education foundation in Galicia $600,000, the Progressive Jewish religious communities in Vienna, Brunn, Budapest, Brussels, Frankfort, Mainz, $130,000 among them and the Vienna emigreates $40,000. The rest of the money goes to Paris and French charities, the Alliance Israélite and other Jewish bodies having $1,000,000 placed at their disposal and nonsectarian charities $200,000.

The New Two Thousand Gowns.

Europeans who like to assert that the favored ones of the old world possess the largest and most varied wardrobes have been taken off their feet by learning that the dainty little wife of Li Hung Chang is the proud possessor of more gowns, without counting any other garments, than any other woman in existence. She has no fewer than 2,000 frocks, and 1,600 women wait in attendance upon her. Probably old Li never worries about the bills when they come in, for those who know declare that he is the richest man in the world.

It is a fact, though, that the Princess of Wales has an elaborate wardrobe. So has the Princess de Sagan, while the Countess de Castellane, who was once a gondola, is said never to wear the same evening dress more than twice.

A Pretty Wedding.

A pretty wedding notice, although the idea is not quite new, is the "Book of Wedding Gowns," designed by a loving mother. This signifies cut from the material of each gown in the transverse, are pasted into a tiny little volume. To each piece of cloth or silk or velvet is attached a special page, the ends of the squares having small strips of the trimming and lining matching the material in the center, and in each page is written a short descriptive of the gown's use. The whole is bound together with ribbons of pink and green.

Learning From Children.

It was very cold that it was a poor mother who could learn something from her children, and that is true, in the statement. One morning my two little boys were romping in the room where I was trying to do my work, when I spoke up somewhat impatiently and told them to go out into the yard and play, for they were in my way. "Mamma," said the youngest quickly, "please don't tell us we are in your way, but let us help you make the bed." I begged the suggestion, and they really helped me more than they hindered me, but as long as I live I shall never forget my boy's reproach, "Mamma, please don't tell us we are in your way." We mothers cannot be too careful how we speak to the little ones, for often, when we are tired and worried, our words sound much harsher than we mean they should.

A mother of seven children once said to me that when her little ones were all and required much care she used to think what good times she would have when they were grown up and out of her way. Now they are grown and scattered far from home the mother feels that she would willingly go through all the trouble of raising them if they were only small and at home once more. It is well to remember that we can only have our children while they are small, therefore let us take our comfort along with our woes.—Anna Jones in Housekeeper.

The Raised & Storm.

A handsome young fellow stood at the glove counter of a large store the other day and fairly hypnotized the four girls attending.

He had a word for one, a smile for another, a wink for a third and a pink for the fourth—by far the prettiest of the quartet.

The floral offering was too much for the pinkish chee, and they all turned on the radiant recipient of the flower.

"Say, Nellie Norrie, you're too fresh! Ain't you got a nerve! Flirting that way with a stranger."

"Oh, go on!" laughed the shameless one. "Youse all jealous! Tain't my fault if he thinks me the prettiest."

The young man laughed gayly.

"That's so," he said. "And you are too."

He was a silly young man.

For the trio now attacked him with scathing bitterness.

"Say, mister, you'd better get your change and go before the floorwalker comes around. You'll get that poor girl discharged, and that'll be a nice thing, when her father drinks and her mother's in the hospital."

"Nellie" turned on them like a fury.

"Don't you tell no lies about me," she said fiercely, "or for two pins I'll tell what you said about the floorwalker. You talk to me all you like, young man."

But the young man had fled before the storm that he had so foolishly fomented.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Teacher Wouldn't Tell.

Mrs. Brown—Our language is full of idiomers. For instance, I met a man once who was a perfect bear, and they call him a "civil engineer."

Mrs. Smith—Yes, but that's not so ridiculous as the man they call a "teller" in a bank. He won't tell you anything. I asked one the other day how much money my husband had on deposit, and he just laughed at me.
